

Neurofutures Documentary

We are a group of students from the Technical University of Munich studying Neuroengineering. During our degree, we filmed a documentary on the influence of science-fiction on the research and development of technology. For this, we interviewed several people who are involved in high-tech research to explore the respective utopian/dystopian/neutral perspectives on the future, as well as to discuss possible books, movies, shows, or franchises that have inspired their worldview.

The purpose of this documentary is to discover the visions of the future that guide cutting edge technological research as well as narratives of global risk, combining areas surrounding Neurotechnology, AI and Ethics.

We welcome you to our public viewing of the film:
